GETTING STARTED

How to Use This Guide

This guide covers statewide Alaska resources: the agencies, hotlines, and courts that serve every community. Because Alaska is vast and much of it is off the road system, each section also tells you how to find the right office or program for your specific region.

Start here: the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence & Sexual Assault (907-586-3650) can connect you to local shelters, advocates, and legal help anywhere in the state.

Before you call: have your documentation ready — dates, what happened, any messages or photos saved, and whether a report has already been filed elsewhere.

If you're in danger: call 911 first. Every other number in this guide is for follow-up support, not emergency response.

What's inside

- Emergency & immediate-danger contacts
- Statewide Alaska agencies (ANDVSA, Office of Victims' Rights, Violent Crimes Compensation Board, State Troopers)
- Reporting to local police & county sheriffs
- Domestic violence protective orders explained
- Step-by-step: filing a report & getting a protective order
- Specialized support (children, sexual assault, legal aid)
- A one-page master contact sheet

Legal notice: This guide offers general information for educational purposes and is not legal advice. Phone numbers, addresses, and procedures for Alaska state and local agencies were verified at time of writing but can change — confirm current details with the agency directly. Stalking.org is not affiliated with any agency listed and is not a crisis service. If you are in immediate danger, call 911.

Emergency & Immediate Danger

If a stalker is near you right now, threatening you, or has violated a protection order, these are your first calls — before anything else in this guide.

Emergency — Police, Fire, Medical

911

Call if you are in immediate danger, right now.

Alaska State Troopers — Dept. of Public Safety

907-269-5511

LOCAL POLICE

● Reporting to Local Police & Sheriffs

Stalking is usually reported to the police department in the city where you live or work. Outside city limits and in much of rural Alaska, the Alaska State Troopers are the primary law enforcement agency.

Your local police department (non-emergency line)Dial 911, or search “[your city] police non-emergency”

Stalking can be reported at any police department or, outside city limits, to the Alaska State Troopers.

Alaska State Troopers — local postFind yours via dps.alaska.gov

In most of Alaska outside the larger cities, State Troopers are the primary law enforcement agency.

STAR (Standing Together Against Rape), Anchorage907-276-7273

Toll-free statewide: 1-800-478-8999 · 24-hour sexual assault response and advocacy.

Good to know: you can file a report at any police department, not only the one nearest the stalker. Ask for the officer's name, a complaint or case number, and how to follow up.

Domestic Violence Protective Orders in Alaska

Emergency order: a peace officer can help you get a 72-hour emergency protective order, often outside of normal court hours, when you are in immediate danger from a household member.

Longer-term order: a long-term protective order is filed with the Alaska Court System and can last up to the length the court orders, with provisions like no-contact and stay-away requirements.

Cost: there is no filing fee for a domestic violence protective order in Alaska.

Alaska Court System

Publishes protective order petition forms online and at every courthouse; self-help centers can assist with paperwork.

Step-by-Step: What to Expect

●Filing a Police Report

- 1 Go to any police department or county sheriff's office — you do not have to go to the one nearest the stalker.
- 2 Ask to speak with an officer and say clearly that you want to report stalking or harassment.
- 3 Bring your documentation: dates, messages, photos, and names of any witnesses.
- 4 Ask for the report's complaint number before you leave, and request a copy if possible.
- 5 Ask about victim assistance resources — many departments have a victim advocate or can refer you to ACADV.

●Getting a Protective Order

- 1 Call 911 or your local police if you need an emergency protective order right now, including outside court hours.
- 2 To file a longer-term order, go to your nearest Alaska Court System location and ask for a domestic violence protective order petition.
- 3 Fill out the petition with as much detail as possible — dates, incidents, and any history of the person's behavior.
- 4 A judge can issue a temporary order, often the same day, sometimes without the other party present.
- 5 Keep a copy of the order with you, at home, and at work, and give one to building or school security if relevant.
