How to Use This Guide

This guide covers statewide New Mexico resources: the government agencies, hotlines, and courts that serve every county. Each section also tells you how to find the right local office near you.

Start here: New Mexico has a Stalking and Sexual Abuse Restraining Order, separate from its domestic violence order and not dependent on your relationship to the stalker.

Before you call: have your documentation ready — dates, what happened, any messages or photos saved, and whether a report has already been filed elsewhere.

If you're in danger: call 911 first. Every other number in this guide is for follow-up support, not emergency response.

What's inside

- Emergency & immediate-danger contacts
- Statewide New Mexico agencies (Crime Victims Reparation Commission, Corrections Victim Services, Courts)
- Reporting to local police & county sheriffs
- Domestic violence protective orders explained
- Step-by-step: filing a report & getting a protective order
- Specialized support (child abuse, elder abuse, civil rights)
- A one-page master contact sheet

Legal notice: This guide offers general information for educational purposes and is not legal advice. Phone numbers, addresses, and procedures for New Mexico state and local agencies were verified at time of writing but can change — confirm current details with the agency directly. Stalking.org is not affiliated with any agency listed and is not a crisis service. If you are in immediate danger, call 911.

Emergency & Immediate Danger

If a stalker is near you right now, threatening you, or has violated a protection order, these are your first calls — before anything else in this guide.

Emergency — Police, Fire, Medical

911

Call if you are in immediate danger, right now.

New Mexico State Police (find your local district)

LOCAL POLICE

● Reporting to Local Police & Sheriffs

Stalking is usually reported to the police department in the city where you live or work, or to your county sheriff outside city limits.

Your local police department (non-emergency line)Dial 911, or search “[your city] police non-emergency”

Stalking can be reported at any city police department or county sheriff's office.

Your District CourtFind yours via nmcourts.gov

File a Stalking and Sexual Abuse Restraining Order — separate from, and not dependent on, a domestic relationship.

Good to know: you can file a report at any police department, not only the one nearest the stalker. Ask for the officer's name, a complaint or case number, and how to follow up.

COURTS

Restraining Orders in New Mexico

Stalking and Sexual Abuse Restraining Order: for any victim of stalking or sexual assault, regardless of your relationship to the person.

Domestic Violence Protective Order: used instead when you and the stalker are family or household members, or have a dating or intimate relationship.

Two stages: an ex parte temporary order gives immediate protection; a final order can follow after a hearing.

New Mexico Courts

Step-by-Step: What to Expect

● Filing a Police Report

- 1 Go to any police department or county sheriff's office — you do not have to go to the one nearest the stalker.
- 2 Ask to speak with an officer and say clearly that you want to report stalking or harassment.
- 3 Bring your documentation: dates, messages, photos, and names of any witnesses.
- 4 Ask for the report's complaint number before you leave, and request a copy if possible.
- 5 Ask about victim assistance resources — many departments have a victim advocate or can refer you to ACADV.

● Getting an Order of Protection

- 1 Go to your county District Court and ask for a Stalking and Sexual Abuse Restraining Order petition.
- 2 Describe each incident with as much detail as possible — dates, what happened, and any pattern you've noticed.
- 3 File the petition with the court clerk.
- 4 A judge can issue a temporary ex parte order quickly, often without the other party present.
- 5 The order is served on the other party by law enforcement — keep a copy with you, at home, and at work.
